About the programme

In the Indian knowledge tradition, teachers have played a more significant role than in other cultures across the globe. In addition, we have entrusted teachers with the enormous task of constructing society and culture. Our Indian knowledge tradition's inclusiveness has enabled it to continuously adapt to shifting social problems. Even while everything has changed as a result of the current state of the world, there has also been a noticeable tendency toward renewal in the field of education. Teachers have an even more important role in this era of transformation. With the ever-changing landscape of education, UGC began offering orientation programs to in-service teachers. Setting up in-service training programs for teachers seems to be highly beneficial in preparing them for these new positions and inspiring them to take on new tasks. The provided Orientation program includes a set ideological base and a practical approach in order to substantiate these resolutions. The orientation program being presented is modelled around the University Grants Commission's National Education Policy 2020 orientation programs. As a result, teachers will receive the required training in relation to eight different components through this program. It is envisaged that this orientation program would offer the essential and thorough knowledge of social, educational, technical, and subject-related topics
